How to Buy Your Own Home

Unit 3: Lesson 2: How to shop for a mortgage loan

Thinking through writing

During the final stages of the home-buying process, there are a lot of details to keep track of and decisions to make. Most first-time home buyers rely on a variety of people to help them through this process. These may include friends who have bought a house in the past, family members, employers, staff at a community housing agency, their real estate sales professional, their lender, their real estate attorney, or others. Who would you rely on during this process? What kind of support do you think you might need? In the space below, write a list of individuals who might help you during the process. Include the kind of support that each might provide.
